Civil War Centennial News

Plans are underway to replace the travel exhibit in the Centennial Center with a larger and more elaborate exhibit next summer.

This year's exhibit proved interesting and helpful to Virginia tourists, according to Center hostesses, and a student-teacher exhibit will be put in its place this fall.

The exhibit will be dedicated to students and teachers and will include letters from students inquiring concerning the Civil War and the Centennial. In addition, teaching aids and items of interest to the students and teachers will be on display.

A fantasy film, not as yet named, is being filmed for the Civil War Commission to be released about the time of the commemoration of Appomattox.

In the film, a statue comes to life to tell the meaning of the Civil War to a visitor who is trapped at the base of the statue by a parade.

Ten cast aluminum battle maps explaining the Civil War battles in the Shenandoah Valley have been set up at different points in a Circle Tour. These are placed at Harrisonburg, Lacey Spring, New Market, Fort Hill, Cedar Creek, Kernstown, Winchester, Front Royal, Port Republic and Cross Keys, and are three by four foot maps charting the movements of opposing forces at the high point of the battles, showing Confederate forces in red and Federal forces in blue. They give names of commanders and subordinates, coordinates and by means of broad arrows, the movement of troops. Each map has a permanent narration beside it.

Among the visitors at the Centennial Center during the summer was a group of students from the East-West Center of the University of Hawaii. On tour of the United States, the students were from India, Thailand, Indonesia, the Philippines, Viet Nam, Korea, Japan, Formosa, China and Pakistan.

Dear Child

by Frank Flynn
Appomattox

Dear little child tender in years,
Innocent, winsome in rose ways.
What has life to offer you as you start to travel
down Life's great highway?

When you come to the crossroad of life.
To enter at the gate,
What will be your decision
And what will be your fate?
Will you take the broad and crooked road?
Or will you take the narrow and
straight?

I pray, dear child, you will take Jesus
as your guide.
And he will take you down the
straight
and narrow road
And be a faithful friend
If you follow by his side.

When Life's Journey is over
And you come up to the Great
White Throne
And the book of life is open
And you see your name there interwoven,
Then happy you will be because
You have chosen to follow Jesus
And in heaven with him you be.

INDIA's Prime Minister Shastri said Saturday the food shortage in affected areas of his country will be "tided over" in two weeks. He said the whole sale grain dealers the government blames for creating artificial scarcities will not be permitted to do it again. Kerala state, worst hit by the food shortage, needs 40,000 tons of grain to see it through the present crisis. This, Shastri said, would be supplied by the central government. He added a bumper winter crop was beginning to reach the market, and this would relieve the nation's shortages.

Hunter Reports Award To State Bankers Assoc.

The outstanding service which the Virginia Bankers Association has given to Virginia's agriculture, both through educational programs for better banking services, and through special activities in the agricultural field, has received special recognition from the Bankers Association, the National organization of the banking industry, according to William A. Hunter, Agricultural Key Banker for Appomattox County. The A.B.A.'s Agricultural Committee Chairman, T. P. Axton, President of the Lafayette Savings Bank in Lafayette, Indiana, has advised Mr. Hunter that the Virginia Bankers Association has been awarded the Committee's Annual Agricultural Award on behalf of the bankers of the State.

The work of the Committee is implemented by county key Bankers. In presenting the award the ABA Agricultural Committee stated that "state association" activities through the years have played a prominent role in helping banks remain the largest lenders to agriculture. Today's dynamic agricultural industry presents a real challenge to bankers to see that efficient farm businesses receive the kinds and amounts of credit they need. Beyond making farm loans, however, banks have a responsibility to assist farmers by every means available in making the adjustments necessary for the future development of our agricultural economy."

Among the outstanding agricultural projects of Virginia banks during the past year was the annual Farm Credit Conference held for bankers and professional agricultural workers and attended by County Agents and leading agricultural economists of the nation. Over 200 persons attend

Old Belt

DANVILLE — The downward trend in prices for Old Belt flue-cured tobacco that began two weeks ago continued last week as most grade averages were unchanged to lower.

For the first time since the second week of sales, quality of offerings failed to show some improvement.

Volume was not as heavy as many growers have finished selling their 1964 crop.

Gloves Better Than Brushes In "Job At Top"

Four painters from Kentucky climbed 420 feet to the top of the State Police Tower, Appomattox, to apply orange and white paint in a four-day paint marathon where the "paint brushes" were gloves. State police personnel quoted the painters of the Glove Industrial Contractors, Henderson Ky., as saying that some gloves wear out in 15 minutes—some in two days during their painting sessions. They dip one gloved hand into paint and cover the steel frame. Gloves work faster than brushes or spray guns, the men say. The work begun on Thursday was completed Sunday. The men climbed to the top and worked down using about 50 gallons of paint.

Logs Stand Test Of Time

About three miles from Appomattox on the Red House Road. Rt. 727, there's a farm on which all the buildings are made from logs. In 1883 it was the home place of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Giles and is now owned by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Giles. S. B. Giles, a carpenter by trade, hewed the logs by hand and built a kitchen and storage houses for corn and wheat together with the main house, shown above right, with the smaller buildings in the rear. The present owner says that all building are still in good condition and in use. He says that it took many, many coats of paint to cover the log buildings, which have only been painted since the O. T. Giles were owners. O. T. Giles says that all of the original wooden shingles have been replaced with more modern roofing. The farm covers 79 and one-half acres. The Giles have nine children, seven girls and two boys, now all grown, who have been reared in this 70 year old farm house.

Veterans Question VA Answers

Q — My husband died as a result of injuries received in World War II. He obtained a GI loan during his life-time, which is now paid off. Am I, as his widow, also eligible for a loan?

A — Yes. Any widow of a World War II or Korean Conflict veteran may be eligible for a GI loan if the husband's death was service-connected. The fact that the veteran may have obtained a loan does not affect the widow's eligibility.

A — By all means pay your premiums when they become due, even if you do not receive the premium due notice. Remember you have a 31-day grace period from the due date. Be certain to include your policy number with your remittance

Election Day? It's Dec. 14

American voters chose between President Johnson and Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater Nov. 3, but the next president won't really be elected until Dec. 14.

That's when the 538 presidential electors meet in the 50 state capitals and in the Dist of Columbia to cast official votes which will decide who will be chief executive.

The Constitution leaves up to the states the decision how electors are to be chosen. In the early years of the nation state legislatures picked them. But since the early 1800s the people have had the responsibility.

Each state has a number of electoral votes equal to the number of its U. S. senators and U. S. representatives. Overall, there are 538 electors, making 270 a majority.

What happens on election day?

Voters, in effect, pick a slate of electors for their state. The electors of the party that gets the most popular votes in the state are empowered to cast the state's vote for president and vice president in the electoral college.

When does the Electoral College meet?

On the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December, this year Dec. 14. Victorious electors in each state meet at the state capital.

How does the Electoral College vote?

Each elector casts one vote for president and one for vice president. The only restriction is that they may not vote for two person from the same state. The official electoral votes are then sent to the president of the Senate, normally the vice president, but this year Senate President Pro Tempore Carl Hayden, D-Ari.

Can a presidential candidate get fewer popular votes than his opponent and still be elected?

Yes. For example, a combination of 11 large states and the District of Columbia could provide enough electoral votes to win the election. A candidate could win these states by small margins, lose the other 39 by big margins and have fewer popular votes than his opponent yet win the election.

Has the candidate with fewer popular votes ever been elected president?

It has happened three times. In 1824 John Quincy Adams finished second in a four-man field but finally won when the electoral college failed to provide a majority and the election was settled in the House of Representatives. In 1876 Samuel Tilden lost by one electoral vote to Rutherford B. Hayes after leading in popular votes. In 1888 Grover Cleveland had a s'ight popular lead but Benjamin Harrison received a majority of electoral votes.

What are the chances for a change?

Slight, judged by Congress' past reactions to suggestions.

Fifth Follow-Up Begins In ACS Cancer Study

The fifth annual follow-up in the American Cancer Society's massive Cancer Prevention Study has begun in Virginia.

Volunteers will again report on whether the men and women they enrolled in the study in the fall of 1959, are alive or dead. In Virginia, the study involves 41,114 men and women and 2,684 volunteer researchers. Nationwide the study covers more than 1,000,000 people in 1,121 counties in the United States.

In 1959, these persons furnished many details about themselves and their pattern of life. They filled out questionnaires answering 250 carefully framed questions that might help to determine if those who develop cancer differ in some ways from those who don't, with respect to environment, habits, exposures, and way of life.

Valuable information has already emerged from the study, according to the American Cancer Society. It has helped develop a preliminary analysis confirmed that certain danger signals had a high relationship to deaths for specific sites of cancer. It was also found that certain general physical complaints such as loss of appetite, shortness of breath, and a tendency to fatigue easily were related to the cancer death rate. Further analysis will determine whether these symptoms appear before the cancer has spread to an incurable stage.
